August 2015

Why this flag? First, I ran out of things to write regarding our events. Second, the cars pictured behind our Sec State Kerry in Cuba brought back memories of my school days. Pictured beyond the fence were '59, '57 and '55 Chevys. Each appeared to be in outstanding shape. The actual flag rising instilled pride as well as a deep concern over the future. Unlike my grandkids, I recall “duck and cover” drills during elementary school. Then, JFK televised a warning of the Cuban Crisis when we stood on the brink of a nuclear war.

Those cars are testimonials to the strength and ingenuity of people who love their cars. They lack the superior vendor support like that which we enjoy from the Pantera community and yet the islanders continue to fabricate parts to keep their classics alive. I admire those who repair and improve our cars. So many articles in the POCA newsletter describe repairs like the April one on fixing a door handle by JS Kean. Some motivation is based on availability, price, customization, safety, weight reduction, or performance. No matter what drives us, we all must look to the dedication of the Cubans who have kept their cars alive for 53 years as a source of inspiration.

Will my grandson be driving my white cat 53 years from now? Will yours?
